Experts from five continents attend the GPEC® General Police Equipment Exhibition & Conference for police equipment and related special equipment to find out about the latest products, technologies and trends in this segment. GPEC® is the industry's leading trade fair and covers the complete spectrum of current equipment and future technologies for government authorities with security technology, police equipment and services.

The conference brings together international manufacturers, product dealers, top management personalities, acquisition decision-makers, instructors and users. Attendance by security experts from 59 nations at GPEC® 2012 confirms that this event and its German location have further expanded its position as Europe's largest closed trade fair for police and related special equipment.

The patron of GPEC® 2012 was Germany's Interior Minister and Member of the German Parliament, Dr. Hans-Peter Friedrich.

The trade fair and the elements making up its programme highlighted two trends in particular:

- A growing cooperation between internal and external security
- Growing inter-ministerial and international collaboration in resolving national and joint security concerns
